and an equally ambitious clique surrounding him, wanted to conquer the world. Their conquest was to be one of might, for the success of which their leader believed in divine guidance. Might makes right, was their misguided conception.

Remember the boasts of the Kaiser. They were beliefs and doctrines to him. He was going to dine in Paris on a number of occasions. His armies were going to teach this world a lesson for resisting his divinely-inspired mission to become emperor of the world, all, the Socialists may not be as Great was going to be the indemnity he had planned to exact from the United States when his armies reached New York City, for this country had no right to interfere with the victorious march of his soldiers.

Feeding the Foe and a Cunning German in It requires a lot of courage to go into a life-and-death fight. ult requires a special order and quality of courage to adjust serious issues without a fight.

But it requires the highest possible courage to be magnanimous. Especially is this true when exercise of magnanimity means painful, pinching, long-drawn-out sacrifice.

All of which is apropos of the so-called "appeal" of Dr. Solf for fund for the starving German millions, which "appeal," by the way, was not ready-made in behalf of the starving Huns, but for the purpose of "starting something" among the allies.

Five millions of professedly anti-war Germans never peeped Shoo!" when the war lord piped war on his royal dudelsack.

No Germans objected when their submarines sank tens of millions tons of foodstuffs, more than enough to feed all the German people in their present extremities.

When military defeat loomed the German people revolted.

They had waited more than four years for victory.

They got defeat. The cup was bitter.

They spat it out.

They repented. Sinners sometimes turn that card on deathbeds.

Now they want us to go on short rations to feed them.

It's going to be hard work to be magnanimous on half-feeds, or thereabouts, isn't it? But we are going to do our best in the matter of food for the starving women and children, and even the blood-repeal of the seaman's bill, or that the starving women and children, and even the blood-repeal of the seaman's bill, or that the conference of the seaman's bill, or that the starving women and children are the conference of the seaman's bill, or that the seaman's bill, or the seaman's bill, or that the seaman's bill, or the seaman's bill thirsty men of Germany. That was already settled in the conference that made the armistice terms, America, England, France and Italy all agreeing to it. But Dr. Solf thought that by addressing America on the subject he would peeve England and France. And from now of this will be the chief aim of the Germans—no matter if the rulers are autocrats or anarchists—to stir up bad feeling between the allies and the United States.

That was already settled in the conference the blood-fine seaman's bill, or that Smoot is to get him to make a speech in favor of the retention of private ownership of railroads. There's no telling what will happen, either. The effort of the two stand-pat leaders may be entirely successful, and they may be able to announce wits some give to their fellow conspirators one of these days that "Fighting Bob" has come over to them, boots and Joseph I. Now the grime and the slime of the crime of all time Is banished from Belgium and France,
And we fill with the thrill of the will and the skill, Whose record reads like a romance. Gun to gun, we have won and the Hun is undone

The rising tide of Socialism in ome of the other countries of the world makes us cast around and see what there is in the governmental fabrics of our own nation which the Socialist can lay claim to, in some

On the first page of this morning's issue of The Washington Herald you see a picture of the victor and the vanquished. Turn to it again and reflect for a moment.

More than four years of world slaughter has just been brought to an end. There is not any one mind great enough to grasp the meaning of it all. The untild suffering, incalculable loss of life, terrific destruction and waste is beyond comprehension.

And how and why was this hell brought to earth?

QUERIES TO RED CROSS ARE 30,000 WEEKLY

The Bureau of Communication of the American Red Cross is now answering 39,000 queries a week, ac-cording to an announcement from headquarters yesterday. The number is 10 times as great as two months ago.

Of the 30,000 queries, 20,000 the report stated, come from the mothers and friends of men overseas, the remainder being from relatives and friends of the men in camps in this country. The bureau has 100 in France who are attending to the queries concerning soldiers, who have queries concerning soldiers who have fafled to write home, who have been reported missing in action, killed, wounded, sick or taken prisoners. The Bureau of Prisoners Relief, the only organization authorized to aid prisoners of war, sends twenty pounds of food to each man every week.
